
Hi Chung,

As long as you leave the watermark on the image and the site remains a non-profit one, it is fine to use Digital Blasphemy images from the Free Gallery on your site. Please do not use any images from the Digital Blasphemy Members Gallery.

Your site looks very nice. Thank you for checking with us.

Best wishes,
Tena Chapman

Hi Chung

Normally I dislike the idea of mirror sites. I'd prefer people get my wallpapers from my own site. However, you have given me credit for the work and provided a link, so in this case, I have no objection. I also appreciate that you asked me for permission, which is something that most people unfortunately do not do.

Nice site you have also.

Todd

Hello Chung,

Thank you for posting our wallpapers. We see that as a compliment.

There are some rules though. Please do not place wallpapers from our members section, only from our free section. Please do not post more than 20 wallpapers from our site. That's all.

Thanks,

If you wish to post our wallpapers on your website, please abide by these guidelines:

- No more than 10 of our wallpapers can be on your website at the same time. If you want to use more, please just link to AnimeWallpapers.com and tell your visitors to come to our website to get the wallpapers.

- Do not modify the wallpaper images. For example, you cannot remove the AnimeWallpapers.com logo from the bottom.
- Do not inline our images on your website; it won't work. Copy the images to your own webspace before using them.
- You must provide a link to us from your website. Someone who sees our wallpaper on your site should be able to find AnimeWallpapers.com easily; we suggest putting our link under each individual wallpaper that you post.

Hi Chung,

Thank you for your web-mail. I can confirm that Ubisoft are in agreement to you including Ubisoft wallpapers on your site.

Dear Chung,

Thank you for taking the time and obtaining permission. I like what I see of your website so far. My one suggestion is that you put up the author's names near the images so that people know where it came from and that it isn't yours. Also, although I have no problems with the following practice, I assume many people will. The advertisements on your site will probably be making you some kind of money. I understand that websites can be expensive to run and that you are probably just trying to recoup such costs, but if that is the case you might want to put such a disclaimer somewhere on the site. If that is not the case then you might be liable for any money you gained and the artists might want a cut of that money. Again, this is not a problem for me, but it might be a problem with some people.

Here is a link to a higher resolution of that wallpaper of mine that you put up on your site. I have updated it with a signature. Please update your site accordingly.

Permission granted. I have nothing against as long, as you said, the image is unaltered. Let me know (send me links) once the pictures are on your website. I'm happy that you like my works.

Regards!

Raw.

Hi, Chung,

Thanks for taking the courtesy to ask for my permission - it's greatly appreciated.

Please feel free to use any of my wallpapers - I don't mind them being used as long as other people don't try to take credit for them!

A link would be appreciated - please could you link it to <http://timmargh.net/wallpapers/> please?

Regards,

Tim

Yes, that's fine; thanks for asking. It's good to know you liked the picture enough to include it on your site!

Is it possible to include any indication of where it came from? It looks like the page design doesn't include space for any credits with the thumbnails, but perhaps a "title" attribute on the anchor element around the thumbnail would work for those people using browsers that pop up the information in a tool tip. For example:

```

  <img ...>

(The title doesn't really have to be that long, it's just the general idea I'm getting at).

Thanks,

Thank you for submitting your recent request to Codemasters Customer Services concerning Worms 4.

You can use any of the wallpapers from the download section of our website - that relate to Codemasters games - as long as you include a link to our website on the same page and acknowledge our copyright.

Any wallpapers that are provided by companies not Codemasters (that may be linked from our site) you are unable to use, unfortunately.

I hope this is clear.

Kind regards

Rob

Chung,

Go for it man, it's great as long as you credit me.

I really appreciate you asking, I basically stopped posting stuff I made to the internet once someone e-mailed me after seeing that image plastered up in bus-stop ads all over the city of Madrid, Spain, haha.

Anyway, good luck with the site, maybe I'll use it next time I'm looking for a new wall.

Hi!

Sure - you have my permission.

Thank you so much for the kind words.

Would it be too much trouble to ask for a donation - i need all the help I can get (this July first I'm getting laid-off).

Yours truly,

Quote from FAQ:

Can I use your work for my website, CD-cover, screensaver or theme?

Of course you can but please tell me about it and copy the image on your server! Some people did not do that and linked directly to the *.jpg file on my server. This is bad netiquette cause you steal my bandwidth doing this.

Quote from FAQ:

Can I use your pictures for my website or theme?

Yes, but please tell me about it. And if you're going to use one of my pics, please copy it to your server! Some people used my pics and linked directly to the *.jpg file on my server. This sucks!! You're stealing my bandwidth doin' this.

Hi,

You can post it on your website if you will give me (Kelly Tierney) credit for it somewhere on the page because I don't have my website up and running right now. Thank you for the compliment and for asking, I appreciate it :)
